Createspace, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 214 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Secret Service Agent Jessica Fukishura had never been in a violent relationship, hadn t been in many relationships of any kind but she knew from the copious University of Berkeley psychology classes, women s studies and family law courses that the trauma of sexual assault and domestic violence was not only emotional but was a dramatic degradation of a woman s psyche, her physical wellbeing, her interpersonal skills and financial independence. She knew what men could do when equipped with a firearm, club, knife or other deadly weapon. She had witnessed scores of battered women in hospital recovery units and women s resource centers. Saw their battered bodies, their souls on the brink of eternal extinction. She knew early in her law school studies that administering jurisprudence after the fact would not right the wrongs of the past or rectify the present. She knew she had to make a difference somehow. She just didn t know what course the interception of female humiliation would take yet. But she did know that whatever that course might be it would include hurting men and hurting them badly. Supervising Secret Service Agent Jessica Fukishura, gained fame with the killing of two French Iranian sympathizers during an attack on U.S. President Bakus in France. She uncovered sleeper antagonists in President Bakus hometown and a clandestine pack train supply system through Yellowstone National Park. Native Americans from an Idaho reservation receive drugs smuggled on rail cars, move them covertly by pack train into Wyoming, and return with explosives for the Christians for a Better America s Idaho mountain facility. The Idaho smugglers attempt to mask their operation results in a Sheriff s murder, an exhaustive...
