Many of the ancients appear more original than they would be thought, if preceding and contemporary works were still extant. In like manner, various current ideas and metaphors are employed by some modern authors, who, in case the productions of other writers were to perish, might appear to posterity possessed of considerable originality. The later we live in the history of the world, the more scope and materials there are for the exercise of genius. Language is properly the servant of thought, but not unfrequently becomes its master. The conceptions of a feeble writer are greatly modified by his style. A man of vigorous powers makes his style bend to his conceptions. There is an ancient adage, Learning is better than house or lands. Whether the saying arose in times of comparative ignorance, when learning was rare, and therefore fetched its price, cannot now perhaps be determined. Certainly the maxim scarcely holds good in the present day, if it is to be understood as expressing the secular advantages of erudition; for the world in general appears to entertain little veneration for mere scholarship. The high and the low are alike worshippers of mammon; nor do the learned themselves scruple to participate in the idolatry. It can suit only a very limited or very elevated order of minds, to have the chief pleasures dependent on authorship. A writer of talent, who intermeddles with subjects of a local or temporary nature, acts...
